ENGLISH COMPREHENSION & ANALYTICAL ABILITY

Directions: Read the passage below to answer the questions that follow the passage.

In a convention hall filled with auto executives who wish they could wake up to find that 2009 was just a bad dream, David Zuchowski and his colleagues at Hyundai were doing low-key victory laps. But while they plan in 2010 to pick up where they left off, they also tempered expectations that the U.S. sales gains achieved by the Korean automaker can be repeated. “We will not have the same margin of difference that we did last year,” David Zuchowski said at the Detroit auto show. “Our sales were up 8 percent in a market that was down 21 percent. There are a lot of things that happened with our competition, with our marketing, that really put us in a different area. We think for sure that we’re going to grow our volume this year and we’re going to grow our market share,” he added. “If nothing else changes, and we held our 4.2 percent market share into 2010, we think that in itself accounts for 45,000 units of additional volume. And we think we’re going to grow our share on top of that because we have some really terrific new products.”

John Krafcik, CEO of Hyundai’s American sales operations, said the first goal is to hold onto the market share gains of 2009. Last year, Hyundai’s U.S. sales rose 8.3 percent to 435,064 units. Its share of the market jumped to 4.2 percent from 3 percent in 2008. Hyundai expects U.S. sales this year to hit 11.4 million, maybe even 11.5 million units. U.S. sales fell 21.2 percent last year to 10.4 million units. As U.S. automakers in early 2009 were concerned about their own survival, “Hyundai Assurance” was introduced as a safety net for consumers afraid of losing their jobs. Just shy of 100 customers returned cars under a program allowing buyers to walk away from loans without a negative mark on credit reports if they lost their jobs. The program has been extended through 2010.

“It elevated our brand,” Zuchowski said of the Hyundai Assurance program. “People who never used to consider us now are.” Car salesmen watch this “consideration rate,” which is as it sounds — whether a consumer will consider a brand when making a purchase decision.

1. Which of the following inferences is false according to the passage ?
